

Volunteers needed for “Brain Awareness Week” April 3rd and 4th 2014

BAW is an outreach program that takes place every year. CSU volunteers (students, professors, post doctoral fellows, staff) are trained to present material to local high school students. This year we will be at Rocky Mountain High School.

Both CSU volunteers and high schools benefit from the event – Volunteers are able to share their passion for neuroscience (and have community outreach to put on future applications or resumes!) High school students get a more in-depth look at various aspects of neuroscience and participate in fun, small group activities. Topics include sensory systems, neuroanatomy, epilepsy, Drosophila neuromuscular junction and more. Station materials and training are provided.

Interested?

Please contact: Dr. Leslie Stone-Roy (leslie.stone-roy@colostate.edu) for more information

